

NATALIE FYFE

I am an interdisciplinary artist and performer from the U.K with a background in visual arts. My research stems from psychopathology, incorporating my own struggles with mental health alongside an in-depth study of the voice, the inner voice and the mouth from a psychological and philosophical position. My research is an interrogation of the mouth as a lost voice. I question the distinction, the boundaries and the amalgamation of different voices within one body, one mind. Overtime, living with a psychiatric disorder has unintentionally integrated as an intangible element to my artistic practice. The mouth is both my site of anxiety and my artistic medium. By facing the site of anxiety, fragility becomes strength resulting in raw, empathetic explorations of the mind.
