

CASPER VERBORG

Pieces of canvas that have been sanded or left blank, a clearly visible brushstroke, and paint drips: Casper Verborg's paintings are alive. Verborg has developed an idiosyncratic palette with characteristic colors in unexpected combinations. Cheerful at first sight, but at second thought more alarming, toxic even—like that irresistible piece of candy that is actually of chemical substance. Verborg's handling of color perfectly matches the ambiguity of the image. Whereas in an earlier stage there appeared groups of figures in enigmatic interiors, meanwhile the scenes have changed and the paintings gained a different focus. Theatrical processions thinned out to just a few characters while the background gained prominence—more explicitly present yet more abstract, and thus more universal. In recent paintings the image can be read as interior or exterior, but also as forest, architecture, or oil stain. The later paintings are freed from narrative while the image gained more breathing space. The painted figures, facing up to sublime and often threatening nature, are as anonymous as they are recognizable. Transcending the individual, they do not stand for themselves but humanity. Even the well-known figures of Kim Jong-un and Donald Trump cannot prevent that feeling. Depicted relatively small on a large diptych, surrounded by an abstract landscape and flanked by a big yellow gorilla, they have become two random men atop the monkey rock, yet stripped away from their power. In the interplay of figuration and abstraction, recognition and alienation, a self-portrait of the painter as archetype proves a key piece. Fluttering shapes derived from the leaves of a studio plant assume a life of their own, in contrast to recognizable elements such as a carpet or a chair. These shapes put up a barrier between image and spectator, as disturbing elements placing themselves in front of the depiction, complicating the viewing process. Thus there rises an inevitable and growing desire to view past them, to view one's way through the foliage and discover the parallel universe beyond. - 2023 figments of imagination Luycks Gallery Tilburg, Netherlands At first glance they appear to be colorful, almost festive scenes. People on the beach, or at least in swimwear, gathered in small groups, sitting, lying, talking to each other. Yet that initial suggestion of casual entertainment and pleasure is contradicted by the alienating environment. Sometimes magical-realistic elements emerge, other times the separation between heaven and earth dissolves into starkly colored layers of paint. Verborg's Figments of Imagination, literally imaginations, imaginations, tell us mysterious stories. Born from the artist's brain, they appeal to our own imagination. The subtitle, 'A Fool's Paradise', underlines the refined ambivalence in which the suggested paradise has degenerated into a sometimes frightening yet colorful dystopia. Thanks to this ambiguity, Verborg's works remain an intriguing feast for the eye and mind.

2021 De Balie Amsterdam, Netherlands Van 12 tot 27 juni 2021 is op de bovenfoyer van De Balie de expositie #artistsupportpledge te zien. Dit initiatief van kunstenaar Matthew Burrows is ontstaan in Londen om kunstenaars te ondersteunen die wereldwijd hun werk niet meer konden laten zien en verkopen door de coronamaatregelen. Zijn idee werd al snel op verschillende plekken op de wereld opgepikt. In Nederland organiseerden TINKEBELL., De Balie en This Works Club, geïnspireerd op Burrows initiatief, een unieke expo. Binnen twee dagen was een derde van al het werk al uitverkocht! Helaas moest De Balie toen de deuren sluiten vanwege de coronamaatregelen. Vijf maanden later gaan de deuren weer open, want de nood is hoger dan ooit.

2021 Resending voice Galerie Helder Den Haag, Netherlands De schilderijen in de expositie Resending Voice van Bas Wiegmink (1977) en Casper Verborg (1981) zijn totaal anders van karakter, terwijl ze ook elkaar aanvullen. Verborg schildert met grote gebaren en felle kleuren taferelen waarin bekende figuren, dan wel onbekende personages, uit de achtergrond opdoemen. Hij toont de wereld als het theater van innerlijke roerselen zonder expliciet in te zoomen naar wat feitelijk gebeurd is. Zijn personages hinten op menselijk drama of gewoon dagelijkse zaken. Er zijn referenties naar schilders uit de Romantiek maar ook naar meer hedendaagse abstractie. Daartegenover overheerst in de werken van Wiegmink een weelderige flora met een vooral indirecte aanwezigheid van de mens.

Strakke gebouwen in zijn schilderijen verwijzen naar de modern-brutalisme architectuur, die hem aanzet tot onderzoek naar de relatie mens-natuur. Levensenergie doet hier desolate ruimtes overwoekeren. Er is een optimistische kijk op de wereld te ontdekken in de minutieuze veelkleurigheid van de doeken. Elk van deze schilders pur sang vertelt zo vanuit eigen perspectief. Wel met steeds de mens als protagonist in zijn wereld als plaats delict. De mens vermag iets groots verrichten maar kan het daarentegen ook vernietigen. Het zijn complexe verhoudingen tussen de mens en zijn omgeving: natuur en architectuur, gemeenschapszin en individuele gesteldheid. In de expositie Resending Voice worden de verhalen opnieuw verteld voor frisse reflecties op en betekenis van onze kostbare wereld. www.galeriehelder.nl/

- 2019 Go Figure! Galerie Bart Amsterdam, Netherlands Through the centuries, the portrait has had many appearances, ranging from naive to lifelike and from idealized to abstract. The paintings and sculptures in this exhibition are portraits in the broadest sense of the word. Those portrayed are not necessarily recognizable as a specific person, but are defined by a more universal characterization. The four exhibitors join a centuries-long portrait tradition, which at the same time has been released almost completely. The works come together in a contemporary portrait gallery, as 'portraits of our time'. www.galeriebart.nl
