JONATHAN HIELKEMA

I am Jonathan Hielkema (b. 1994) I grew up in Twisk and Hoorn, The Netherlands. I completed my BA in Arts at the Royal Academy of Art in The Hague in 2018, where I currently reside and work. Concurrently, I pursued academic growth through the MSc Media Technology program at Leiden University. Amidst the turmoil of 2020, I completed the BKB Academy political fellowship in Amsterdam, and subsequently, I got my Master's degree from the F for Fact program at the Sandberg Institute in Amsterdam. Last year, I worked as a specialist tutor at the MA Information Design program of the Design Academy Eindhoven. At this moment, I find myself donning the hat of an IST tutor at the Royal Academy of Art in The Hague. Meanwhile, my involvement with Touchy Studios continues to be an everyday affair. My approach is provocative, containing personal involvement and unbeknownst collaborations, resulting in explosive and often uncomfortable works that challenge people's biases about society and common sense. Previous works address 'touchy' subjects such as privileges, the status quo, exploitation, and worryism. I am privileged, I am the status quo, I am being exploited and I am worried. #touchyoulater!

EXHIBITIONS

- 2024 Sand Nudes The Hague, Netherlands
When everyone believed last year marked the final edition, Adam Centko surprised us by launching another edition of Sand Nudes this year. And this isn't just any edition! This time, the team from Touchy Studios—comprising Sean Charlton White, Jonathan Hielkema, Femke Hoppenbrouwer, Sandipan Nath, and Julia Schmitz—created a video about a ghost aspiring to become a privacy officer in the government. To achieve this goal, the ghost must connect with Mei Po Man, but he faces a daunting challenge: no one can see or hear him.

- 2024 Heden Galerie The Hague, Netherlands
Bermuda Open Studios and Heden are teaming up to create the exhibition 'Nightshift', around the theme of the night as a place for free expression, identity formation and community making. The selected artists are: Jonathan Hielkema, Alice West, Dirk Hardy, Shana de Villiers, Silke Riis, Jesus Canuto Iglesias, Koos Breen, Femke Hoppenbrouwer, and Adele Dipasquale. They will get the opportunity to exhibit their works in a group exhibition together with works from the permanent collection of Heden, on show from November 8 to

- 2023 Lobster Lobby Koninklijke Academie van Beeldende Kunsten The Hague, Netherlands lobsterlobby.nl/ From mid-2023, I spent several months (w/ Pawel Pokutycki) tutoring students in a programme called 'Not All Of Us Can Do Great Things'. After several weeks of researching possible topics, it finally boiled down to the invasive American crayfish. Soon this group was renamed to Lobster Lobby. The Lobster Lobby, a spin-off of the Royal Academy of Art in The Hague, got intrigued by the unwanted underwater species as a metaphor for our capitalist society. Once the food of poor people, the American crayfish is now served on silver plates and satin napkins. However, largely unnoticed under the surface of the canals, the species is taking over. Next to making a mockumentary, the students also demonstrated in front of the US embassy and hosted an event at PIP (The Hague) – where they screened the mockumentary and organised a party. It was truly a pleasure to work with this group!

- 2023 Sand Nudes The Hague, Netherlands In honor of Sand Nudes' fifth and ultimate odyssey edition, we embarked on a spontaneous adventure—a one-day video project called 'Saturn Turn.' Sand Nudes, known for its notoriety as the world's worst film festival, embraces the notion that anyone can create a flawed movie, which we collectively witness together. Touchy's Collective artists Téa Boyarchuk, Jonathan Hielkema, Sandipan Nath, Lance Laoyan, Julia Schmitz, and Manus Nijhoff captured the transformative power of the cosmic rite of passage, urging us to mature, confront our choices, and embark on a journey of self-discovery. sandnudes.com/

Where the discourse in art is already largely male-dominated, we (Sanne Pieters, Sydney Rahimtoola, Manus Nijhoff, and I) thought it was time to do something about this. Watched by 7,900 people at the Celestial Vault in The Hague, artists such as Olafur Eliasson and Damien Hirst, and organisations such as Martijn Nekoui's MOAM, are made quite the fool of.
- 2018 Is This What I Want? KABK The Hague, Netherlands
whydesignwhyart.manusnijhoff.nl/ Whilst graduating from the art academy in 2018, the question Is This What I Want? got stuck in my mind. I was in serious doubt about my future career as an artist. Because how do I ensure that I get to work after my graduation ceremony? How do I get a foot in the door with gallery owners, institutes, museums, or funds that can help me build a life as a professional artist? Based on two parts, I tell the story of an insecure art student and a confident musician. The art student wonders about art's political role as a "consciousness-raising" tool. The musician believes that through music his message becomes public and influences the Collaboration TV arose when Vincent and I sat down in front of a screen discussing whether how and when we would start working on this shared project. Whilst being distanced 700 kilometers from one another, we started working on 'the concept of collaboration'. The series initially started with questioning whether collaboration is possible on distance and to what extent you can arouse mutual understanding among two people, who know one another not even though they were pressed together. Forced collaboration has been an interesting starting point regarding the steps we took in our first episodes. Over the period of three months CBTV resulted in an accumulation of video works compiled into the concept of linear TV. The television show broadcasts interviews with insiders and outsiders of the art world. Recorded at street, art festivals, symposiums and galleries all around Europe.

INTERNATIONAL EXCHANGES/RESIDENCIES

- 2025 Praksis Oslo Oslo, Netherlands
Developed with artist Harold Offeh, residency 29 For real? addresses ideas of authenticity and identity in art and society. Contemporary media are permeated by misleading content that serves motives of financial and personal gain. Within this economy, authenticity – the quality of being real, genuine or true – carries a high premium. Influencers trade on their authenticity to sell their followers a model of what and how to be. Fake news spreads uncertainty and lies, and erodes trust. Politicians seesaw on policies in pursuit of public favour. By contrast, art supposedly exists outside of the need for truth or purpose – so what is the place of authenticity in the context of art today? The practice of artist and PRAKSIS residency convenor Harold Offeh explores concepts and questions raised by the inhabiting and embodying of histories, including the notion of authenticity. In this residency, Offeh invites participants to probe the concept of authenticity. Questions include: What are the distinctions between the authentic and the fake? Where are their boundaries (if they exist)? Today, what does it mean to be authentic, in the domains of both art and society?

Jonathan Hielkema Paris, France
acidsurfing.com/about Acid is a publishing project looking at surfing through the prisms of exploration and everyday life. Shortly after surfing had become important for us, we felt the need to portray surfing in a broad context and explore its fringes with art, science, philosophy and poetry. So we'll do just that, trying hard not to sound too serious.

Touchy Studios Jonny Toxic The Hague, Netherlands
jonathanhiekema.com/books/memoirs-of-masculinity-the-more-you-play-with-it-the-harder-it-gets Imagine being born in the 1990s, in a family of seven boys, growing up in a small town in the province of North-Holland. You and your best friend enjoy wearing nail polish, your favourite colour is pink, and no one ever made you feel like this is a deviant thing to do. But then you turn twelve and change from primary to high school. Before you know it, you are getting bullied because of your pink nails and long blonde curls. You start changing your clothing, remove the nail polish, decide to wear the same sort of baseball cap all the local boys are wearing, hiding your curls. And when you are called "homo", "flikker", "pissnicht", or "piss-faggot", you ignore it. Soon after, it is 2021, you reach the age of 30, and you are suddenly called to account for your masculine behaviour. What do you do? What do I do? For the first time in my life, I am negatively confronted with my masculinity. Fuck, what is my manhood anyway, I ask myself. Could it be true that I have adjusted to a set of stage directions, a 'script' men have to learn to perform, in order to gain entry into 'the world of men'? And is that a world I
