JAN DIRK ADAMS

situations consisting of parts like movements words performed by actors and physical spacial elements that together become circumstances that can hopefully facilitate certain things to be able to happen by themselves

I want the movements, sound and the mess that appears by accident wherever I look to be able to somehow start to exist by itself at the moment where I am apparently showing something to someone. At the moment this results in situations where it is unclear for the viewer how they should position themselves towards that what is present in the space. This is important because I want the viewer to be completely by themselves when they move into the situation with the work. I want to make things that are right here in your immediate surrounding and I want the confrontation to be hard and I want there to be no safe space or possibility to frame.
