HAEUN NA

Me: Koean-asian-women-migrant in the Hague. Born and raised in Korea, culturally strongly influenced by USA, had an access to academic study at KABK in the Hague.

I work primarily with installation and performance to tell stories. I reinterpret tradition through my perspective—as a woman, an Asian, and an immigrant—asking how we can create our own traditions here and now. My practice examines who holds the power to define what is marginal, strange, incorrect, or trivial. I raise these questions through my work and share them with others, often through workshops and collaboration. I am particularly concerned with making visible the solidarity formed through women's labor. My work seeks to visualize this often overlooked labor—to render it present and perceptible.

PROJECTS

- 2026 Soy sauce tasting workshop brad wolff project Amsterdam , Netherlands Through tasting soy sauce, this workshop invites us to question how we experience and define the taste of Asia. Look, smell, and taste your way to finding the soy sauce that suits you best. Have you ever stood in front of endless shelves of soy sauce, only to end up buying the same one every time? Or wondered how soy sauce could be used in more creative ways? At our Soy Sauce Tasting Workshop, you'll explore 8 different types of soy sauce from across Asia, but it is blid tasting! Through guided tastings, you'll compare subtle differences in aroma and flavor, create your own soy sauce tasting notes, and cook a dish that perfectly

Kimjang workshop minor moons
Netherlands We followed a kimchi recipe from the zine "Introduction to Creative Kimchi Making" written by Yun☐☐.
*Kimjang is a Korean term for a collective practice of making kimchi together. Kimjang used to be household work for female family members. It was laborious work, but it was also about sharing women's power and showing solidarity among women back in the days. Bringing Kimjang into minormoons - what would it mean if we perform the recipe from Yun in The Hague, far away from home? Could it also be a way of solidarity? How can Kimjang be actively seen as a way of sharing knowledge? In the end, the questions are interesting, but most importantly, yes, we had a spicy mouthful journey.

Haeun Na The Hague , Netherlands

Drawing from Haeun Na's personal experience as a cashier at an Asian supermarket in Germany, this book explores how soy sauce arrived in Western Europe and shares various soy sauce recipes from Korea, Japan, and Taiwan through interviews. "What is the best soy sauce?" was actually the most frequently asked question from German customers. But how do we choose the only one best? Although we say we could, what are the standards for selection and who has the power to 'select'? This is a salty zine, sharing common experiences as Asians living in Europe. How distant are we, yet alike? And most importantly, WHAT IS THE BEST SOY SAUCE?
